NOTE FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

SUBJECT: Your Annual Report

A decent draft of your annual report to the President and the Congress will be ready by the weekend. It is faithful to the approach and outline you approved in October. While parts of it have been vetted by experts in the various subjects, parts have not, and the total has not had extensive review. We are planning for delivery to Executive and Congressional readers by the HPSCI's deadline of 25 January. Since you will be away 20 December to about 12 January, you may wish to at least scan the draft at this stage. A related question is the timing of NFIP principals review, which we would prefer to accomplish after your initial reactions by letting them check accuracy and fair representation of respective particular interests, but which may not be practical on this occasion. Please indicate your procedural preferences:

Let me have the draft this weekend.

I'll take a cleaner draft with me on leave.

Proceed with NFIP principals review in my absence, explaining the timing situation to them and reserving me flexibility.

Proceed with NFIP agencies' working level review in my absence, and prepare principals for a light review in mid-January.
